Kabkab dates

Kabkab dates are one of the most beloved and popular varieties of dates in Iran. Due to their sweet and delicious taste, soft and tender texture, and valuable nutritional properties, Kabkab dates hold a special place among Iranians and in other countries around the world.

In the Khalal stage, Kabkab dates are yellow, and in the Rutab stage, they are light brown and burnt brown when fully ripe. In their fully ripe state, their color transforms into a dark brown. Kabkab dates are considered semi-dry in terms of texture.

These dates are cultivated in tropical and semi-tropical regions of Iran. Some of the major production areas for Kabkab dates include the provinces of Bushehr, Fars, Khuzestan, Hormozgan, and Kerman.

Mazafati Date

Mazafati dates are a variety of Iranian dates that have gained worldwide recognition for their exceptional quality and taste. These dates have a dark color, a soft and moist texture, and are often referred to as "Rotab" in Iran. Mazafati dates are predominantly cultivated in the city of Bam in the Kerman province, contributing to the local fame of "Bam dates."

Harvested in late summer, Mazafati dates are promptly moved to cold storage to maintain their freshness and flavor. These dates are known for their high nutritional value, providing a rich source of natural sugars, fiber, iron, and potassium. Mazafati dates are not only delicious but also offer health benefits, including supporting the immune system and promoting digestive health.

Piarom Date

Piarom Date is one of the Iranian date varieties that has gained worldwide fame due to its unique taste and appearance. This date has a dark brown color with an elongated shape and a sharp tip. Piarom Dates are cultivated in the Hajiabad County of Hormozgan Province, which is why they are also known as Hajiabad Dates.

Harvested in late summer, Piarom Dates are immediately transferred to cold storage to preserve their quality and flavor. These dates are sold in domestic and international markets at a relatively high price. Piarom Dates have numerous nutritional benefits, serving as a good source of sugars, fiber, iron, potassium, and other nutrients. Consuming Piarom Dates can contribute to strengthening the immune system, improving digestive function, and reducing the risk of cardiovascular diseases.
